The history of the mine, which has only been fully developed during the last year, is a curious one. The original several developed during the last year, is a curious one. A correspondent of the Sydney Merning Herald who visited the mine some time ago told the readers of that journal how, returning from the mountain, he stopped at a wayside inu, where "a tall, weather-beaten, grizzied-looking man" took his horse to a well to drink.

This was the original holder of the freehold, who parted with it to the Morgans. He said he had always believed the mountain to be of ironstone; and never knew of

He said he had always believed the mountain to be of ironstone; and never knew of the fortune that was so long within his grasp. In olden days he used to sell the painice-stone looking quartz in Rockhampton, to clean the hearths and doorsteps of White, John W. Wilson, W. H. Webbergant, Geb

Pattison, who are now four of the principal proprietors, held the second half. The Messrs, Morgan subsequently disposed of their shares to these gentlemen for £25,000; and in 1886 the present company was formed with a capital of £1,000,000 in 1,000,000 shares of £1 each, of which 17s. 6d. is paid up.

There are already about 5,000 inhabitants, and the object which has attracted them all is a conical shaped hill about 500 feet in height above the water level, and with nothing, so far as outward appearances are concerned, to distinguish it from numerous other well wooded hills which sarround it. At the foot of the mountain is one set of works, which are duplicated about half way up it. Some 200 feet from the top a tunnel runs in for about 700 feet, when it is met by a shaft, down which the stone is sent. It is then brought through the tunnel in small tracks and shot down a slide to the upper works, while a cable transway supplies the lower works. At the top of the mountain is a regular quarry, where some five dozen

Fifty-two feet have already been ent away, and they are now working at a second bench. The preponderating stone is a kind of black fromstone, with no appearance of gold whatever, yet it yields as much as five and six onnees to the ton. Some of the stone is reddish and looks as if it may contain copper, while here and there is a bank of yellowish sand which yields eleven ounces to the ton. "Exactly."

"How cold has it been this winter?"
"Eighty below, but that was off the trail and not included in the weather bulletin." That's awful. How's the state of society "Improving all the time. I don't have to kill over one man a week now."

"Then—you—you—"
"I have to do it. I'm a sheriff, you see, and I have to keep the boys in subjection."

Indians about? "Oh, yes; but they are very tame and amble. I have my boots blacked by a
